Knowledge	Recognise some key features of the period studied with help or guidance.	Recall a few simple examples from the past, sometimes with help.	Identify some key features of the period studied with simple descriptions.	Give some accurate examples from the past to support my ideas.
Analysis	Make simple statements about the past and are beginning to use terms like cause, consequence, or change.	Describe historical events with some simple ideas, sometimes using terms like cause, change, or similarity.	Describe simple changes in the past and are using ideas like cause or change to explain them.	Give my own opinion about the past, with examples of the concepts.
Sources	Identify simple details in a historical source and say what it shows.	Extract a basic inference from a source with evidence.	Make supported inferences and can comment on accuracy based on my own knowledge.	Begin to say if a source might be useful or accurate, mentioning something about who created it or why.
Interpretations	Recognise that there is more than one way to understand a historical event.	Recognise that interpretations about historical events can be different with evidence.	Suggest simple reasons why people might have different views about a historical event.	Give my opinion about different interpretations and start to say why they might be different.
